Notice of Privacy Practices for Protected Health Information

When it comes to your protected health information, you have certain rights. These include your right to:

View your medical record or get a paper copy of your medical record. I will provide a copy or a summary of your health information, usually within 15 days of your request. I will charge a reasonable, cost-based fee, in accordance with state guidelines.

Request that your medical record be amended to correct incomplete or incorrect information by delivering a request to me. I may deny your request if you ask to amend information that is already accurate and complete.

Request confidential communications, including that I contact you in a specific way or to send mail to a different address. I will abide by all reasonable requests.

Ask to limit what information I use or share, including restriction on disclosures of medical information to a health plan for purposes of payment. I will abide by this request, unless I become legally required to share that information.

Receive a list of those with whom I may have disclosed information.
